

Louis the frog has an adventure

By Cameron Saxton

One day Louis the frog went on an adventure. He went to the beach and decided he would go to the Antarctic Ocean. He swam and he swam until he didn't know which way was South and which way was North. He decided to go West then he stopped and he decided to go East. After a while he stopped. He didn't know where he was. Then he met a polar bear and the polar bear showed him where his house was. Louis said "Are you crazy?" Then the polar bear said "I'm not crazy! Nobody is". Then Louis replied "Yes nobody should be crazy", and then the Louis asked "Do you want me to show you where my house is?" and the polar bear said "Yes please Louis". Then Louis said "Oh yeah I can't remember the way home, can you help me?" The polar bear said "No, but I do know somebody who can help you, my friend the penguin, he knows how to get you home." They go to see the penguin to ask if he can help and the penguin said, "Yes, I can help you. Where is your house?" Louis said "It is in Ipswich." "And what number is on your door?" asked the penguin. "A four and a three," said Louis. Then the penguin said "Ahh, I know where your house is! I will definitely show you where your house is." Then Louis the frog said "Yes! Yes! I love you! Thank you! Thank you! Uh oh!" Then a big wave washed them into the sea and then the wave was so big it threw them right back to Louis' house and that was the end.
