FOG

Once there was a frog who lived with his best friend Martin and they both lived in a bog. One morning they were saying to each other that how bored they were because nothing ever happened at the bog. All they did was sit down and relax. One night when they were just about to get in the water and have a midnight swim there was some thick fog. They both thought it was very strange. Suddenly there was a quick flash of lightning. Things seemed very different. Then they found out that they were lost and they couldn't find the bog. So they both curled up into small balls and tried not to be scared. Something strange was happening, and then they heard lots of different noises. They then saw lots of shadows moving in the distance. They were wondering what was happening. The thick fog started to disappear and then they saw that they were somewhere different. They were definitely lost. All the shadows were coming very close and then they realised they were in a strange jungle with weird animals. There was a flying dog, snakes with feet, and there was a koala bear with a lion's head. They were extremely scared and then they realised that they had said how bored they were at the bog and how excited they had been if they actually did something appreciated to being excited. So they 1000 times that they wished they were back at the bog, they thought that would work but it didn't unfortunately. After a couple of days they both said it together for the last time and guess what, the thick fog came down again and then up again. They both were surprised at where they were. They were at the bog at midnight about to have a swim. They both couldn't believe that if they both said it together they would be home.

And that's the end of the story
