Louis and the mystery

Once upon a time there lived a frog called Louis. He was a nice little frog who had three little freckles on his left cheek, a big cheesy smile, and two little black eyes. But the special thing about Louis is that Louis is a secret agent, and where he does his agent work is down in the ground, and you have to have a special gadget to get down there. It's called HQ

One day he was reading the newspaper when he heard that king frog said his daughter and his crown had been stolen. So as soon as he could he zoomed of to the rescue. When he got to the royal palace he saw someone in the distance carrying them away. It was too late he could not catch them now. With his close up camera he could just see the face.

The next day he set off on a journey to find the princess and the crown. The funny thing is that Louis wanted to marry the princess. As he kept going on he found the lair in the distance. But then he kept going on and on but it seemed to get further away. But then a dragon came swooping down. Louis brought out his sword and nearly swiped the dragon. But then the dragon said "Don't hurt me. I am here to help." So Louis climbed on him and rode off to the lair of the beast. When he got off the dragon said "You would never have got here without me." Louis entered the lair of the beast. It was dark and dingy and it was freezing. Suddenly the beast came into the cave and said "I am Trigathagon." He was a spiky looking monster with teeth as sharp as razors and a tail as big as a lorry.

The fight began, first the monster struck first, his tail went up and down. Louis jumped as high as he could and then Louis struck. He missed. The monster fired his spikes. One of them hit Louis's jumper and stuck him to the wall the monster said "say your last words " but just then Louis got out his dagger and stabbed the monster. With that he grabbed the crown and the princess. Later Louis married the princess.
